It's a Great Month for Your Patriotic Programs! Grand Master's Message for July 2004

We are reminded that July is the time for patriotic celebrations in commemoration of the founding of these United States.

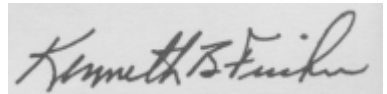

We enjoy the freedom to live, believe, think, work, and worship as we choose in this great land.

We have endured hard times before and survived them a better people. One only has to look at the current situations around the world to see that we have been blessed. We should give thanks for this country and those who have sacrificed so much to bring us to this point!

It is my wish that each and every Commandery will have a patriotic program of some type to celebrate the founding of this country and the freedoms we enjoy. (It can be at any time of the month or even of the year.) Hopefully, many of you will (or did) march in your local 4th of July parade to show the world at large that we as Templars do support our country.

Be sure that your Commandery plans a patriotic celebration or joins in one for every patriotic event that will arise in the years to come!

May God bless our leaders and the United States of America.

"The Magazine for York Rite Masons - and Others, too"

JULY: The month, like June, has an important patriotic holiday: July 4th, Independence Day, is probably over by the time you receive this issue; however, as the Grand Master points out on page 2, any day is a good one to celebrate our patriotism. As usual this issue has a comprehensive breakdown of the results of the 36th Voluntary Campaign for the Knights Templar Eye Foundation, starting on page 5. Check for the names of new KTEF club members in this issue, and join us for an 11-day cruise in Alaska, starting on August 26, 2004! Information for this wonderful trip is on page 24. Grand Master Kenneth B. Fischer has renewed his emphasis on drill teams for this triennium: Don't miss the pictures of these illustrious teams that performed at the 62nd Triennial Conclave; they start on page 14. The Brother and Big Band musician on our cover is Clyde McCoy, of course, and his story by Sir Knight Joseph E. Bennett is remarkable, entertaining, and begins on page 25.

of the Grand Encampment General Chairman of the 36th Annual Voluntary Campaign

The 36th Annual Voluntary Campaign
Is History... "Team Templar" Beat Last Year!

Thank You, Sir Knights! YOU Did It!
YOU Beat Last Year!

The 36th Annual Voluntary Campaign for the KTEF closed with a grand total of $928,714.89, a whopping $123,942.59 over last year's total of $804,772.30.

On behalf of the officers of the Grand Encampment, the Trustees of the Eye Foundation, and more importantly, on behalf of those who benefit from your generosity, I thank each and every Sir Knight who played a part in making this a most successful Campaign.

Our hats are off to Ohio, Texas, and Pennsylvania, who finished as the top three in dollar contributions.

Special recognition also belongs to South Dakota, Utah, and Nevada, who finished as the top three in per capita contributions.

Following my note will be a complete recap of this Campaign!

The time is right to start preparing for the 37th Campaign. What will you and your Commandery do to make it even better?

It has been an honor working with each of you, the staff of the Eye Foundation office, and the magazine staff, as the cheerleader of this program. May Almighty GOD bless you as you do HIS work through the Knights Templar Eye Foundation!

Courteously,
Dave

Ascension Day Service in Torrington, Connecticut

On Thursday, May 20, 2004, about 45 Knights Templar and 5 Master Masons gathered at the Memorial Chapel in the Hillside Cemetery in Torrington, Connecticut, for the 138th time to celebrate the mystery of the Ascension. A very meaningful ceremony was conducted by Sir Knight Fred Lorenson, after which the participants gathered at the Kaaban Club of Plymouth for a dinner. The occasion was hosted by the Clark Commandery Association of New Haven Commandery. The association is under the direction of President, Arthur H. Carlson; Treasurer, Leonard F. D'Amico, who also served as Master of Ceremonies; Secretary, Richard V. Travis, who also served as usher at the chapel and libation server at the club; and trustee, Frederick H. Lorenson, who served as Prelate. Music was conducted by Willis Copeland and William Buick. There were in attendance 5 Past Grand Commanders as well as Sir Knight William F. Lott, R.E. Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery of Connecticut. There were also 6 Past Grand Masters as well as M.W. Brother Joseph J. Howard, presiding Grand Master. Several other Masonic bodies were represented by their leaders.

Clark Commandery was proud to have been the first Commandery to observe Ascension Day. This commemorative day was part of Clark Commandery's religious activities for more than 120 years, and when Clark Commandery merged with New Haven Commandery, it was decided that the Clark Commandery Association would continue to carry on this long standing tradition. ## Assimilating New Templars Into Our Ranks

Assimilation of each new Templar should start when he is elected to become a member of our Order. Notification of his election should be given to him immediately. He should be congratulated by his Templar friends and assured of the wisdom of his course of action. He should be given the dates at once for receiving the Orders of Knighthood. Some Past Commander or other highly qualified Sir Knight should be assigned by the Eminent Commander to act as his counselor from that time on. His advance to the Order of the Temple should be the signal for special notice to his Templar friends of the time of his Knighting.

The evening of the Knighting should become one that he will never forget. Here is the time and place when important and lasting impressions will be made. If the work is done in a dignified and exalted manner, he will respond - as thousands have done before him - and become deeply impressed. If the work is done in a careless manner, he may be forever lost to our cause.

The ritualistic work should be programmed in such a way that there be no lost motion or wasted time. Everything should be well timed. A "stage manager" should be selected whose sole job is to see that the work moves smoothly and without gaps. The ritualistic work deserves the assignment of the best and most talented ritualists available.

After all, it is the candidate who is the most important one to consider, and he is entitled to the best exemplification the Commandery can provide.

After his Knighting, the new Templar should be warmly welcomed by every Sir Knight in the asylum, and made to "feel at home" at once. He should be given some small assignment - no matter how small - so that he will return to the asylum at the very next Knighting, when he can live over again the beautiful work in which he has participated. From that time on his Mentor should give him instructions about the customs and traditions of the Order. He should "take him under his wing" until he is thoroughly oriented.

The follow-up process cements this fine relationship and secures his continued interest and involvement in the Order. If there is a drill corps in the Commandery, he should be invited at once to join. The sooner the newly knighted Templar learns how to handle his sword and tactics, the better member he will become. The early days and weeks of membership will often be decisive as to whether the new Sir Knight will take an active interest in Templar activities or become absorbed in other affairs and fail to come back.

Many Commanderies, at the time of the Knighting, present a new Templar with one or more of the following: a membership certificate, a Knight Templar lapel pin, an up-to-date roster, and a calendar of upcoming events.

A special supplement entitled "New Member Packet" has been developed by the Grand Encampment Membership Committee and can be provided to assist you.

Previous Crusades - Lessons Learned

Start earlier - strong consensus

Need greater engagement by Grand Commandery Officers:

- Promotion
- Recruiting
- Information

Keep program going - maintain the momentum

Get support from General Grand Council/General Grand Chapter early

Maintain continuity of program to maintain momentum

Utilize Grand Encampment website more; also use FTP site

Personal, one-on-one contact is the only effective recruiting technique

Provide clear definition of process on a broad scope - not well communicated

Key man concept good - a "critical success factor"

- Communications varied from good to bad
- Execution of the process varied from good to bad
- Changing of G.C. officers is detrimental to communications and momentum

Need more effective presentation tools, e.g., eye-catching slide show

York Rite, Scottish Rite and Shrine Unity are essential. A Win-Win for everyone!

Build a stronger infra-structure to support membership activities

Grass-roots management is essential to:

- Forecasting
- Recruiting
- Execution of process

Video-tape--"Every Christian Mason Should be a Knight Templar"

Leverage sub-division leadership within the jurisdictions

Need broader coverage of information and communications

Don't compete with other Masonic bodies; think win-win

If the Most Worshipful Grand Master is not a York Rite Mason, make him one and name the class after him; if he is already a York Rite Mason, use him as a sponsor.

Part I: Memories of Brother Clyde McCoy

by Sir Knight Joseph E. Bennett
KYCH, 33°, FPS

The year 1923 marked a serendipitous event in the musical community. Clarence Williams copyrighted his song, "Sugar Blues," that year, and a young trumpeter from Ashland, Kentucky, embraced Williams' song as a musical trademark and rode his distinctive trumpet interpretation to fame and fortune. He was Clyde Lee McCoy, one of the country's most enduring and universally-acclaimed musical performers.

In 1923 McCoy was leading his own little band in New York City, struggling to gain a foothold in the musical world. With national Prohibition in full swing, 5,000 speakeasies in the Big Apple provided a stage to obtain the essential experience. Many of those offered live music for their patrons while they sipped bootleg spirits from a coffee cup.

The story of this particular trumpeter began with his birth on December 29, 1904. Clyde McCoy was the son of a Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad detective and a member of Kentucky's Pike County clan locked in a bloody feud with the Hatfield family of West Virginia.

The vendetta had dragged on for a half century; however, it soon became crystal clear that young Clyde preferred music to rifles, when he procured a trumpet. At the age of nine years, Clyde began to learn the instrument without the benefit of formal instruction.

In 1912 the railroad transferred the elder McCoy to Portsmouth, Ohio, and the family moved right along with him. The nine-year-old soon mastered the trumpet and was sufficiently skilled to perform regularly at church and school affairs. Five years later Clyde was employed as a musician on the Cincinnati riverboats, plying the Mississippi River. He performed on the Island Queen and the Bernard McSwain, both side-wheelers. At 14 years he was the one of the youngest musicians on the river and an outstanding trumpet player, in spite of his youth.

Clyde McCoy had all the attributes for a successful public entertainer. He was a personable and extroverted youngster with a natural talent for pleasing musical patrons. His handsome, slender physique, curly hair, and pleasing public persona were all part of a package which included a skilled musical style guaranteed to please the public. He also acquired some formal musical education, primarily to equip himself with the ability to create his own musical arrangements. That skill was devoted to charting a distinctive musical library which was both pleasing to the musical patrons and an exciting departure from the usual dance-music fare.

In 1920 while still playing on the river boats, a musical associate informed Clyde of an opening for a band at a popular resort location in Knoxville, Tennessee. It was a two-week engagement.

McCoy assembled a small band and boarded a train for Knoxville with a group who had never played together as a unit. They rehearsed in the train's smoker, en route to the Whittle Springs Hotel and Spa, providing some welcome entertainment for the passengers.

When they arrived in Knoxville, owner George Whittle agreed to audition Clyde's "Chicago Orchestra" and approved of their performance. So did the patrons. The two-week gig lasted for two months, and the Clyde McCoy Orchestra was officially launched as a permanent segment of the musical scene.

In the months following the Whittle Hotel engagement, Clyde and the boys slowly worked their way to New York City. They took any job available, and their young leader found enough work to pay the bills.

As 1924 ended, Clyde realized that the band was stuck on a plateau in their quest to achieve musical prominence, and he began a working journey to the west coast. The band was playing in the Los Angeles area by mid-1925, as a musical attraction at the Dome Theater at Ocean Park. During that time frame, Clyde and his brother Stanley, the band's bass player, ventured to a local airfield, bent on a sight-seeing flight over the city. They were seated in the side-by-side cockpit of a World War I biplane, piloted by a tall, taciturn young aviator, who had been touted by another airman present as "the best pilot in the world."

Two years later, while playing an engagement at the Beverly Hills Country Club, Clyde read a newspaper headline which proclaimed, "Lindberg Solos to Paris." It was the same young aviator who piloted him on the sight-seeing flight over Los Angeles.

Home in Kentucky in 1926, Clyde petitioned Daylight Lodge No. 760 in Louisville. He was promptly accepted and received the E.A. Degree on January 9, 1926; the F.C. Degree on May 8, and the M.M. Degree on June 26, 1926. He became a devoted Mason and a lifetime member of his lodge.

Before long, Clyde became a member of the Valley of Memphis, Tennessee, A.A.S.R., and joined Kosair Temple of the Shrine in Louisville, Kentucky. At his death in 1990, Clyde McCoy had been a faithful member of Daylight Lodge for 64 years, a tremendous record of longevity.

McCoy had been experimenting for nearly ten years with a trumpet mute, which he used when performing "Sugar Blues" and many of the numbers in the bands library of arrangements. Clyde's "wah-wah" style had become a distinctive musical identification, and his orchestra was steadily gaining public stature.

However, it was not until the band opened an engagement at the new and opulent Drake Hotel in Chicago in 1930 that Clyde McCoy burst upon the national musical scene.

The Kentucky trumpeter's impressive rendition of his "Sugar Blues" solo, backed by a well-rehearsed and musically-disciplined band performance, drew enthusiastic approval from the patrons at the Drake Hotel. The permanent radio wire at the Drake provided national broadcast exposure for the band. Proof of their growing popularity was confirmed when Clyde was signed to a recording contract with Columbia Records.

His first studio session was on January 22, 1931. Naturally, the first Columbia disc was "Sugar Blues." It was an instant retail success and continued to enjoy successful sales over the years. At Clyde's retirement in 1985, total international sales of his recording, "Sugar Blues," stood in excess of fourteen million.

McCoy's "Wah-Wah Mute" was so popular that he licensed the King Instrument Company to manufacture and market the device. It became a long-term source of income for the astute, young band-leader, one of an impressive list of profitable investments accumulated over the years.

The Clyde McCoy Orchestra enjoyed a long and successful run at the Drake Hotel before beginning a year-long engagement at Chicago's Terrace Gardens. Prior to returning to the Drake Hotel to begin a record-breaking two-year second engagement, the band was featured in a Balaban and Katz vaudeville production. Chicago became McCoy's professional headquarters during the years 1931 through 1935.

In mid-1935 Clyde signed a recording contract with Decca Records, beginning a five-year stay with Jack Katz's very successful label. By 1935 the slim young trumpeter had reached the pinnacle of his career. His success never wavered, until World War II interrupted life in America.

Before the band left Chicago in 1935, McCoy was approached by three investors interested in founding a newspaper for musicians. They needed one more investor, and Clyde was selected.

The name of the bi-weekly publication was "Downbeat," and it became one of the most popular trade publications in America.

One of the "Downbeat" critics, avidly devoted to swing bands, criticized McCoy's music, as "corny, sweet, and gimmicky." It was blatantly unfair to the talented maestro and a tremendous embarrassment to the critic when he learned he had panned one of the owners. Clyde shrugged it off as unimportant.

Clyde and the band accelerated their recording activity when they signed with Decca Records.

At this juncture, it seems appropriate to review their recording history; as well as point out some of the prominent musicians who toiled under the McCoy banner. As previously noted, the band recorded steadily for Columbia Records from January 1931 through December 1933.

The national recording industry was suffering the pangs of the Great Depression in those years, which severely hampered the number of record sales. After signing with Decca, an economy label founded by Jack and David Kapp, McCoy's recording activity accelerated. In addition to conventional retail discs, he began to record regularly at the transcription studios. Those recordings were used primarily in delayed radio broadcasts.

Before McCoy entered military service in World War II, he recorded frequently for Associated Transcriptions, both in Chicago and New York. The ASCAP recording ban in 1941 halted recording of all songs composed by its members.

However, when the war was over, Clyde resumed recording for Lang-Worth Transcriptions in New York and several prominent labels, including Mercury, Capitol, and Vocalion Records. Clyde's recorded evergreen standards plus the immensely popular "Sugar Blues" were always surefire successes. The band played a wide variety of Dixieland-flavored arrangements in a driving, swinging style. Clyde's facile trumpet solos always dominated those numbers, stamping his personal musical brilliance on every tune.

His diverse musical library dispelled any notion that he was "locked in" to his famous "wah-wah" style. His surviving musical legacy confirms that.

The personnel making up the 1935-1936 Clyde McCoy Orchestra represented the most stable lineup of his career. There were few changes over the years, and these mentioned are generally regarded as the crème de la crème. The trumpets were Clyde McCoy, Freddie Train, Duke Dervall, and Tony Donio; the single trombone, George Green; the reed section, George Stone, Tom Ferguson, Chet Lands, and Mick Ashley; the rhythm section, Julie Stauer, piano; Bart Rothery, guitar; Art Dunham, bass; and Davey Gray, drums. Jimmy Dale came aboard in 1935 to assist Clyde with arrangements.

The vocal duties in the band were a minor adjunct before the Bennett sisters joined. After Clyde met the Bennett sisters (their family name was "Means") in their hometown of San Antonio, Texas, they were added as an important part of the musical company. They were Maxine, Marguerite, and Charlie Bell. A younger sister, Billie Jane, arrived in 1940, making the group a foursome. The Bennett sisters trio joined the band during an engagement at the Peabody Hotel in Memphis and immediately began taking an active role.

McCoy's discography indicates that the sisters' first recording appearance may have been for Associated Transcriptions, under the pseudonym "Symphonettes" in June 1936. By January 1937 the girls were working under their own name, "The Bennett Sisters." Male vocal chores by that time were assigned to Wayne Gregg.

Clyde carried a complete vaudeville act with the band when he made theater appearances. He was a fine showman himself and invariably performed an act with a miniature trumpet, along with the Bennett sisters. However, Clyde's famous trumpet was the star attraction wherever the band appeared.

One of his theater innovations was "Te Battle of the Bands." When Clyde and Don Bestor both appeared at the Circle Theater in Indianapolis, Indiana, because of a scheduling mix-up, the trumpeting maestro suggested they have a "battle of the bands." The audience would determine the winner by an applause meter. It was a great hit with the enthusiastic audience, and Clyde arranged for the result to be a tie. The gimmick was so well-received that he frequently repeated the performance in future theater appearances, with the likes of Kay Kyser and Earl "Fatha" Hines.

The McCoy band appeared in nearly every major venue in the country. Clyde never went on vacation, so the band worked constantly, interspersing hotel engagements with theater tours and one-night appearances between longer engagements.

Among the major locations the band visited repeatedly were Elitch's Gardens in Denver, the Steel Pier in Atlantic City, the Aragon Ballroom and Hotel Stevens in Chicago, and nearly every major hotel in cities all across America.

The Chicago area, a mecca for dance bands in the pre-war years, remained one of the band's favorite locations. Their popularity never waned. Clyde's formula for success was simple. His own words explained it: "I always played what the people wanted."

World War II began with the Pearl Harbor attack on December 7, 1941.

A few months later, the Clyde McCoy band was playing at the Peabody Skyway in Memphis, when several U.S. Navy officers were seated at a table. They asked Clyde to join them for a talk during an intermission. The recruiting officers persuaded Clyde and his entire 15-piece band to enlist en masse in the U.S. Navy. That began a tour of naval duty that took Clyde and his boys to a long list of military installations and hospitals. It was a perpetual morale-building tour and represented Clyde McCoy's great contribution to the war effort - on Navy pay! Their record of war bond sales was impressive.

After his discharge in January 1945, Clyde rushed to San Antonio to marry Maxine Means, one of the Bennett sisters. They had been courting since the girls joined his band back in 1936. The long-awaited nuptials took place on January 20, 1945, beginning a long, happy married life which was ended only with Clyde's passing 45 years later.

Clyde reorganized his band soon after his marriage and had it ready for the road in a few weeks. It was a 15-piece group playing the old familiar tunes, which carried him to musical fame and fortune before the war interrupted normal activity. It was gratifying to learn his popularity had survived the hiatus.

For the next decade McCoy worked constantly, reprising most of the scenes of earlier successes and adding new locations to their agenda - primarily Las Vegas. His wife Maxine recalled that Las Vegas or Lake Tahoe were selected for engagements when they needed a "working vacation."

It was both a happy and bittersweet time for them. Although the band was completely booked, the Big Band Era was drawing rapidly to a close. Many of the major hotels and ballrooms were closing, due to their inability to afford the expense of large orchestras. In some cases hotels were discontinuing live entertainment altogether. Life style changes were mandatory for Clyde and Maxine.
