Grand Master's Message for November Thanksgiving - 2004

We have much to be thankful for this year. Even though there is much trouble in the world, we are still very fortunate to be living in this Country and participating in this Fraternity. We have been blessed in so many ways that it is impossible to enumerate them all. The primary blessings we have received are God's Love and the love of our friends and families, so let us give Thanks and be grateful for all that we have received.

I have received a number of complaints about the articles, which are printed in this magazine; i.e., cowboys, movie stars, politicians, etc. Those articles are placed in the magazine for "filler." Why do we need "filler"? Because we are committed to printing thirty-two pages and do not get enough news articles, papers, poems, stories, and pictures from YOU! This is our magazine, and if you will submit the aforementioned pieces, they will be published. If they are time-dependent, they must be in the hands of the Editor at least six weeks in advance of the issue in which you wish for them to appear, so send them in. I do not care who writes them as long as they are in good taste and appropriate for this order.

It's time to plan and begin work for the Annual Campaign for the KTEF. The Campaign starts on December 1, 2004! ## Message from the General Chairman of The 37th Annual Voluntary Campaign

by Dr. James N. Karnegis, Department Commander, North Central and General Chairman of the 37th Annual Voluntary Campaign

EYES ACROSS AMERICA

Now Focus on "Some of Our Business"

S O O B

It is not only the Sir Knights who understand the importance of the Knights Templar Eye Foundation. How about these amazing Ladies?

The Social Order of the Beauceant (SOOB) (originally known as "Some of Our Business") held their Annual Assembly in Little Rock, Arkansas from September 26 to October 1, 2004. The SOOB has been a staunch and generous supporter of the Knights Templar Eye Foundation over the years, and this past year was no exception. Look at their report for the period 9-1-2003 to 8-31-2004: their 5,890 members contributed $34,179.03!

They had 7 assemblies that gave $1000 or more, namely,

Denver #1, Colorado	$2340.58
Newton #6, Kansas	$1341.25
Long Beach #39, California	$1516.16
Los Angeles #42, California	$1809.96
Austin #125, Texas	$1104.03
Norfolk #235, Virginia	$1125.00
Westminster #245, Maryland	$1000.00

This is wonderful news, and every Commandery that is fortunate enough to be associated with an Assembly of the Social Order of the Beauceant should have a special recognition event to thank these special Ladies. They not only support the Sir Knights and the Commanderies every day in many ways, but they also march in the front ranks in the fight against eye diseases. They are the largest organizational supporter of the Knights Templar Eye Foundation, and, up to 6-30-2004, have contributed $1,155,322.87!

Searching for Templars in Provence

by Sir Knight W. Bruce Pruitt
P.D.C., P.G.C., KYGCH

Introduction:

When one thinks about the ancient Knights Templar and their presence in Europe during and after the period of the crusades, it is natural to associate them with France and realize that many of their castles, fortresses, and farmlands were located in that country; After all, the last Grand Master, Jacques DeMolay, and many of his senior Sir Knights were originally French citizens. The trials conducted under Pope Clement V took place in France, and DeMolay and his associates were executed there. Consequently, when I had an opportunity to visit in a part of France, it is not surprising that I should try to find some of the structures of the Knights Templar and determine if some authentic sites associated with that Christian order still remain.

My wife and I recently spent about 12 days in the area of Provence in the southern part of France. She was attending an artists' workshop conducted by her teacher, who is French, and her husband. Since I am certainly no artist, I was "along for the ride." I did enjoy seeing the interesting medieval villages and beautiful fields of lavender flowers, though. Believe me, the artists were treated to many outstanding vistas to paint. I was able to do some special sightseeing, as well as listening in on some of the art lessons. As you will learn later, it is a good thing that I did listen; it came in handy.

We first spent a few days in Paris and then traveled by train to Avignon. From there we went by car up into the hill country; where we enjoyed accommodations and meals in a lovely, old farmhouse, converted into a chambé d'hotel. Its name was "Roquepierre," and it was located between the villages of Aurel and Mont Brun-les-Baines. (Please refer to the map on the cover.) One interesting visit I made was back to Avignon to see the Palace of the Popes. Our "friend" Clement V had left Rome in 1309 to escape the anarchy caused by warring aristocrats. He lived first in Carpentras and later in Avignon. The third Provençal pope, Benedict XII, erected the first half of the vast palace. His successor, Clement VI, finished the job. The palace eventually covered 2.6 acres. The book about Avignon claims that both Knights Templar and Hospitallers had "headquarters" there, but who knows?

I was able to identify several Knights Templar locations. I hope the following brief descriptions will be as interesting to the reader as they were to me. Those sites are shown on the map on the cover. Knights Templar sites are numbered, and a few of the major towns are included just for orientation. Unfortunately, because of distance I was only able to actually visit two of the installations.

1. Richerenches: The description of Richerenches states that it was chosen for the establishment of "the first Commandery in Provence." The travel guide says the following about the order: "The Order of the Knights Templar (12th and 13th centuries), a mighty organization made up of soldier-monks, was founded to deliver the Tomb of Christ in Jerusalem." (Wonder how they arrived at that description?) Today, only walls of the enclosure remain, but there is a self-guided historical discovery path in the heart of the village. It is marked by numerous medallions specifying locations of interest. One wonders what knight may have turned over this village to the order. Was it done during the crusades or after?

2. Saint-Julien-le-Montagnier: This village is located in the area called War," which they advertise as having "the most beautiful villages in France." Certainly St.-Julien qualifies as one of them. It stands at the top of a 578-meter hill. The major attractions are, first, the beautiful Romanesque church, la Saite-Trinite, and second, the ramparts fortified by the Knights Templar. That construction was done in the 13th century. The gate through those ramparts is currently being restored.

3. Le Bourguet: It is unfortunate that the reference books did not tell more about this village, because it is one with a Knights Templar chapel. I wish that I could have gone there to see if that chapel is round, as is speculated about most of those built by the Knights Templar. The village is obviously dominated by that chapel, however, because it has only two streets! One contains the Knights Templar chapel, and the other street has another church. It's a very "worshipful" and "holy" town!

4. Comps-sur-Artuby: This fortified village was, apparently, a major site for the Knights Templar. They are credited with being the lords of the village throughout their existence. The guide references call it one of the most beautiful sites in the Var. The Saint-André chapel was built by the Templars. It is listed as a "fortified chapel," and is registered as a significant historic building. Since it is in reasonably good condition, one assumes that the Hospitallers respected it when they took over.

5. Chateaudouble: The village of Chateaudouble certainly deserves its unusual name - it is the site of two castles. They are perched above 130-meter-deep canyons - an outstanding defense location. Like most of the similar villages, it is replete with cobblestone streets and vaulted passageways. Although there is no specific building identified, the village is listed as "deriving from the Templar era." Very likely at least one of the castles would have been occupied by members of the order. Interestingly, there are also some prehistoric caves near this village, and they are also registered and protected sites.

6. Cadenet: This is one of the sites that I was able to visit, although not able to get any closer than the road, a couple of hundred yards away. It is privately owned and not open to the public. You will see from the figure on page 15 (top) why I am glad I did some sketching. My photographs of both this building and the next one were lost; I only have my drawings to show approximately what they look like.

The tower, known as "Malconseil" is located some four km outside the town of Cadenet. It was built by the Templars along the outline of a thin, rocky crest. Pierre de Cardenet gave his estate to the Knights Templar in 1185, and apparently he became a Knight of the order. A farmhouse was built on the location, along with a modest tower and defensive dungeon. Legend has it that there was an underground tunnel to the Chateau d'Ansouis some kilometers away. Malconseil was handed over to the Hospitallers, as were most Knights Templar assets, in the 13th century. It was sold in 1513 to a certain Hierosme Liotard. It has changed hands many times over the intervening years to owners including the Lord of Collongues, Gabriel-Pierre Davon, and the Justice of the Peace of Cadenet. It was used as a hunting lodge by a Paul Bresson of Pertuis.

An additional floor was added in 1877, and it was decorated in the Neogothic style. There is an annex building across a moat, with a bridge joining the two. The conical-angled turrets and cornice-lined terrace are a later addition and not typical of 12th century architecture. The countryside around Malconseil is a flat valley, so it was apparently intended as a defensive outpost for protection of that surrounding area.

7. Greoux-les-Bains: I have saved my favorite for the last. The picture below will give you a rough idea of the impressive nature of this large fortress, on the top of a steep hill above the village of Greoux-les-Bains. (I can testify to the steepness, since I climbed all the way and walked around the whole thing.) Locally, the castle is called "le Templiers." It has a large, square tower, and a smaller, uncapped, round one. The structure surrounds a rectangular courtyard.

After the manor was given to the Knights Hospitallers, it was sold in 1320 to Arnaud de Than, Baron of Greoux. From then until the 17th century it passed into the hands of various aristocratic families of Provence through marriage or inheritance. In

Formation Of General Grand Encampment

On May 15, 1816, the Grand Encampment of Massachusetts and Rhode Island initiated the movement to form a General Grand Encampment. They appointed Thomas Smith Webb, Henry Fowle, and John Snow as delegates, to meet with delegates from other Grand Encampments, "...upon the subject of a general union of all the Encampments in the United States under one head and general form of government..."

These delegates, with several from New York, which included Thomas Lowndes, met with a group from Pennsylvania in Philadelphia on June 11, 1816. After nine days in Philadelphia and despairing of any agreement with the Pennsylvania delegation, the Massachusetts-Rhode Island and New York delegates moved the "Convention" to New York City and established The General Grand Encampment on June 21, 1816.

Dewitt Clinton, the titular Grand Master of the N.Y. Grand Encampment, who had been elected General Grand High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons on June 6th of that year, was elected General Grand Master to enhance the prestige of the order from the outset. Thomas Smith Webb, the prime mover for this convention and Grand King of General Grand Chapter, was elected Deputy General Grand Master. Among the other officers elected and appointed were: Henry Fowle as General Grand Generalissimo; Thomas Lowndes, General Grand Warder; and John Snow, General Grand Standard Bearer.

The General Grand Encampment was in good hands from the beginning with Webb, Fowle, Lowndes and Snow on the roster of officers. These men had previously proven their dedication and interest toward advancing the principles of Freemasonry in this country. Any organization with dedicated and knowledgeable leadership is bound to succeed. Thomas Smith Webb administered the affairs of the General body until his death on July 6, 1819, two months prior to the second Conclave.

It should be noted here that two problems prevented the Grand Encampment of Pennsylvania from affiliating with the General Grand Encampment. First, as has been mentioned, they considered that the Symbolic Grand Lodge held sovereignty over the Chivalric Orders and could not conceive of a national organization claiming jurisdiction over those degrees. Second, after comparing the ritualistic practices of Pennsylvania against those of New England and New York and finding great disparity between them and being reluctant to consider a revision, Pennsylvania refused to consider unification. Those problems were later worked out, and the Grand Encampment of Pennsylvania received a Charter of Recognition on April 12, 1854.

The General Constitution called for the second Conclave to be held in three years (1819) and every seven years thereafter. Between conclaves, the dais officers were empowered to issue warrants for new Encampments and Grand Encampments, or Charters of Recognition in the case of previously organized Encampments. At the third Conclave in 1826, the Constitution was amended to provide for triennial conclaves for the future.

Two Encampments received Charters at the second Conclave. At the third Conclave, Charters were issued to the following Grand Encampments: Virginia, Vermont, New Hampshire, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. All Grand Encampments were represented at the third Triennial except North Carolina and Georgia. North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia soon became dormant and were reorganized at a later date.

The period of anti-Masonic activity (1826-1832) had a subduing effect on Templar expansion, and a number of Encampments and Grand Encampments became dormant. At the same time, additional Encampments were quietly formed with the result that Templary maintained its numbers during that period. Nevertheless, it was a number of years before Templar expansion resumed.

By the 13th Triennial Conclave in 1856, conditions had normalized throughout the country. Many dormant Grand Encampments had been reactivated and several newly chartered. At that Conclave the Constitution was amended and many titles were changed. The State Grand Encampments were re-designated Grand Commanderies, and their presiding officers became Grand Commanders. All "General" references were dropped from the national body, it becoming "The Grand Encampment" and the presiding officer, the "Most Eminent Grand Master." The local bodies became "Commanderies." This Conclave also first established "the official uniform" for a Knight Templar, which has been revised a number of times in the ensuing years.

There was little similarity in the ritualistic work of the various Grand Commanderies. A great deal of opposition was encountered in efforts to establish a standard work. An approved ritual was finally adopted at the 1886 Triennial, and for the first time, printed. After many years of discussion as to the rightful place of the Order of Malta in the sequence for conferral, it was placed last in the printed ritual. This would indicate that it was the prime degree of the rite, which was not the case. The Order of the Temple remained at the apex, whereas, the Order of Malta could be conferred in full or short form, indicating its lesser status. In England the Order of Malta had been (and is) conferred last as an optional degree, and that situation probably affected the result in the American placement. At the 34th Triennial in 1919, the sequence was altered, and Commanderies since that time confer the Illustrious Order of the Red Cross, Order of Malta, and the Order of the Temple, in that order.

The Grand Encampment, Knights Templar Of The U.S.A.

The Grand Encampment, since its inception in 1816, has been the sovereign head for American Templary. All Grand Commanderies in the United States and the Philippines (and Italy) are subordinate to it. However, all legislation enacted at Triennial Conclaves is discussed, amended, and voted upon, and passed or rejected, by the delegates from the Grand Commanderies and the subordinate Commanderies, so, in effect, the Grand Encampment is actually the Grand Commanderies in legislative session. This differs from the General Grand Chapter and the General Grand Council, where the State bodies are completely sovereign within their jurisdictions.

1782 it was owned by the Albertas family, at which time it was elevated to a Marquisate by King Louis XIV. They used it as a summer residence, but in 1800 it was sold as state property. Royalist thugs pillaged the castle, and it was abandoned.

At the present time this castle is being carefully and beautifully restored, and it is used for cultural events such as concerts, theater, and the like.

8. Hospitallers in Aurel: I would be remiss if I did not also include the bottom picture on the cover from the little village of Aurel, which was our "center of operation." Our instructors have a very nice home there. The tower in that town is attributed to the Knights Hospitallers. It is adjacent to the church, part of which probably goes back to the 12th century. The tower is now private property and also is accessible only from the outside.

Conclusion:

Naturally, this little escapade left far more questions than answers about the locations of Knights Templar in Provence. In the short time I was there and with limited travel opportunities, I was forced to rely on the written word wherever I could find it. It was a lot of fun, however, and well worth the time spent with it. I want to express sincere thanks to my hosts, art instructors Jim Smyth and Brigitte Curt. They went out of their way to advise me as much as they could, and they helped in finding references to much of the above information.

Does this little bit of information whet your appetite, as it did mine, for more information? We can wonder: How many Knights Templar facilities were there in Provence? Can it possibly be known completely? The buildings are one item, many of which still stand and can be seen. What about all the lands and farms, however? Is there any way of knowing how many hundreds of acres were involved and where they are? When you go to Provence or anywhere else in France, I hope you will catch the bug and continue this search. Happy hunting!

Appomattox Commandery No. 6 Repays Visit to Bayard Commandery No. 15 after 114 Years

On March 19, 1890, twenty-one members of Bayard Commandery No. 15 traveled by the Norfolk and Western Mail Train to Petersburg, Virginia, where they were met at the depot and welcomed by Appomattox Commandery No. 6. They joined in formation and marched west on Bollingbrook Street and then left on Sycamore Street, where they were stopped and a group picture was taken. They then proceeded south on Sycamore Street to Central Park, where a large group of spectators witnessed the inspection and services. The Sir Knights then returned to the asylum. Eminent Commander Blanks gracefully introduced the guests and extended to them a most cordial welcome. Most Worshipful R. T. Craighill, Grand Master of Masons in Virginia, being present, was also greeted as a distinguished visitor. The Commandery was opened at 8:00 P.M., where the Order of the Temple was conferred on one candidate. After this the Sir Knights partook of the wholesome banquet prepared in honor of the occasion. Very interesting speeches were made by Commander Blanks and Commander W. F. Winch, Bayard Commandery No. 15. The Sir Knights of Bayard Commandery were then escorted to the depot and left for home, leaving the most delightful impressions and carrying with them, we trust, nothing but happy memories of their pilgrimage to the city.

One hundred and fourteen years later, eleven members of Appomattox Commandery No. 6 traveled to Bayard Commandery No. 15 in Roanoke, Virginia, by motor home and presented a copy of the picture that was taken in 1890 and also a copy of the minutes of the occasion. This event was very enjoyable, and the food and fellowship were incomparable. (submitted by Sir Knight Joe Westfall, P.D.D.G.C.)

Part II: Brother Carl Mays: Trial By Media

by Sir Knight Joseph E. Bennett KYCH,
33<sup>o</sup>, FPS

Immediately, a frenzied outpouring of grief overwhelmed the city of Cleveland, along with the friends and teammates of the popular Chapman. Blaring headlines in the Cleveland press clamored for Carl Mays' expulsion from baseball. Chapman's close friend and teammate, Jack Graney, was so enraged by grief that he had to be forcibly restrained. Carl Mays, the unfortunate Yankee pitcher, was universally condemned for intentionally hitting Chapman - before rationality prevailed. During the immediate aftermath of the event, reason and sanity were a scarce commodity.

Ray Chapman had been the most popular player on the team and a favorite of all Indian fans. The 29-year-old Chapman was a nine-year veteran of the Cleveland club and highly regarded as an above-average ball player. His speed as a base-runner, with an outstanding fielding record, augmented his respectable lifetime batting average of .278. His Cleveland fans considered Chapman a probable candidate for Baseball's Hall of Fame.

Raymond Johnson Chapman was a native of McHenry, Kentucky, born on January 15, 1891. In 1901 his family moved to Herrin, Illinois, where he grew to adulthood and began playing baseball. As popular in Herrin as he was in the baseball community, it was only natural that Ray would become a Mason. He was Raised in Prairie Lodge No. 693 on February 3, 1913, becoming a Master Mason at age 21.

Working his way upward through the minor league system, Ray joined the Cleveland Indians in 1912. From the beginning, he was the most popular player on the team.

On October 19, 1919, Ray married Kathleen Daly, daughter of Martin Daly, one of Cleveland's business leaders and a self-made millionaire. Chapman was being groomed for an executive position in the Cleveland firm of Pioneer Alloys and contemplating retirement after the 1920 season. Kathleen was pregnant when the fatal accident occurred. Her child, a daughter they christened Rae Marie, was born on February 27, 1921.

The funerary ceremonies involved many thousands of Cleveland citizens and baseball fans, including a large delegation of family, Masonic Brethren, and Elks from Herrin, Illinois. It was a moving confirmation of universal affection for Ray Chapman. The obsequies were concluded with the burial at Cleveland's Lake View Cemetery. The controversy over Ray's death raged on.

A despondent Carl Mays voluntarily appeared at the New York district attorney's office, where he gave his tearful version of the accident. Resolved of any culpability, no charges were filed against the submarine hurler. Back in Cleveland, the Indian team, en masse, signed a petition refusing to play against Carl Mays. Jack Graney, the embittered Cleveland outfielder, continued his condemnation of Mays. It became a perpetual drumbeat from the outfielder, who became a Cleveland sports announcer in later years. Elsewhere, the consensus was that it had been a tragic accident. Herold "Muddy" Ruel, Mays' catcher that fateful August 16th, swore that Chapman had remained motionless as the ball approached. Cleveland manager, Tris Speaker, deemed the event an accident, as did many others. The newspapers never softened their account of the accident. The news media seems to have preferred the negative and lurid low road whenever possible.

A stoic and aggressive Carl Mays began the 1921 season with the Yankees, without apparent effect to his pitching prowess. He continued his winning ways by achieving a record of 27 wins, against only nine losing efforts. It was the finest season of his career and a major factor in helping the Yankees win the American League pennant.

The Cleveland Indians had brought young Joe Sewell from the New Orleans Pelicans to fill the shortstop slot vacated by Ray Chapman. Joe quickly established himself as a star of the first magnitude and a brilliant hitter. His distinguished 14-year career was recognized by his selection to Baseball's Hall of Fame in 1977.

Brother Sewell, a native of Titus, Alabama, became a Mason in 1920, when he was Raised in Tuscaloosa Lodge No. 785. He was a diligent and faithful member for his entire life, receiving 50-year recognition in 1983. He and Carl Mays became fast friends in later years, when both served as scouts for the Cleveland Indians. (It was an ironic twist of fate to find Mays associated with the same club which condemned him so vocally in 1920.)

After a brilliant regular season in 1921, Mays continued his sterling pitching in the first game of the World Series against the New York Giants. He delivered a five-hit shutout, which the Yankees won with a score of 3-0. In the fourth game of the same series, Mays was working on a two-hit shut-out in the eighth inning when he suddenly lost his effectiveness. He gave up four hits and three runs in that inning, opening the door for a Giants' win by a score of 4-3. The Giants went on to win the World Series. Once again, May stood accused of wrongdoing in the series, because of his performance in the fourth game.

New York sports writer, Fred Lieb, came forward with an unsubstantiated story about Carl Mays having taken a bribe to lose the fourth game deliberately. Lieb alleged he was told that Carl's wife, Marjorie, had been assigned to signal from the stands when the bribe was delivered. Commissioner Landis immediately assigned a detective agency to make a complete investigation of the charges. An exhaustive examination by the agency cleared Mays of any wrongdoing, declaring the charge without merit. Nevertheless, the stigma of the Chapman tragedy continued to stain Mays' reputation, and the negative publicity was damaging.

The constant anxiety and trauma of adverse publicity began to effect Carl's baseball performance and strained his relationship with his teammates. During the 1922 season, his record declined to 12 wins and 14 losses, his first losing season with the Yankees. The hostility continued into the 1923 season, and the result was predictable. Mays posted a dismal season record of five wins and two losses. Manager Miller Huggins and Mays had never been on good terms, so Carl's departure was inevitable. He was sent to the Cincinnati Reds team, via the waiver route, at the end of the 1923 season. Sports writer Fred Lieb continued to repeat his charge that Mays not only conspired to lose the game in the 1921 World Series, but in the 1922 series as well. No credence was given his claim.

Carl Mays roared back with the Cincinnati Reds in 1924. He was the Carl Mays of old, with the usual sizzle on his submarine sinker. At 32 years of age, he proved himself up to the task of pitching a 20-game winning season. He worked in 37 games, winning 20 and losing nine. The magic deserted Carl in 1925. He pitched in only 12 games, winning only three times. He made a valiant effort in 1926 and for the last time posted a great record, winning 19 games, and losing 12. However, his strong arm had lost some of its power, quite evident in the next two years, 1927 and 1928. Carl won only seven games in two seasons, before being released at the end of the 1928 season. He signed with the New York Giants for one more major league season, appearing in 37 games in 1929. He won seven and lost twice in his final year in the major leagues.

Carl began his Masonic degree work in 1925 in Portland, Oregon, where he and Marjorie had established their permanent home. After receiving his Entered Apprentice Degree on September 9, 1925, in South Gate Lodge No. 182, he delayed until November 22, 1927 before completing the Fellowcraft Degree. He was Raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason on December 20, 1927. Years later, he transferred to Canyon City Lodge No. 34 in 1966. Carl Mays was a faithful and esteemed member until his death.

Carl Mays concluded his career in the Major Leagues with an outstanding record of achievement, while enduring a continuous atmosphere of hostility and distrust from teammates and management alike. During his 15-year tenure, he won a total of 207 games, with 126 lost. Mays compiled an earned run average of 2.92, an impressive figure achieved during the course of 490 games and 3,041 innings pitched. Those statistics were more than enough to qualify Mays for selection to Baseball's Hall of Fame.

Unfortunately, selection is a popularity contest to some degree. Due primarily to the negative influence of the sports writers who have a role in selecting inductees, Carl Mays never had a chance for consideration.

The stock market crash ushering in the Great Depression of 1929 wiped out nearly all of Carl's financial assets. Instead of retirement, he felt compelled to play minor league baseball for a time to recoup some of his losses. Carl played a total of two years for Portland of the Pacific Coast League, then Louisville, and finally, the Toledo Mudhens, before hanging up his spikes permanently in 1931. Again, personal tragedy struck the Mays' family when Carl's beloved mother, Louisa Callie Mays, passed away. In 1934 his wife Marjorie died suddenly at age 36 from complications of an eye infection, leaving Carl with two teenage children; Carl, Jr., and Betty.

Carl eventually met and married Esther Ugsted, a North Dakota native, then living in Portland. Finally, after many years, tranquility came into his life. Esther proved to be an ideal mate for the taciturn ex-submariner. Together they established an up-scale hunting and fishing resort-lodge in the village of Dayville, Oregon. Dayville is located on scenic U.S. Route 26, bordering the Malheur National Forest in eastern Oregon.

Not yet 50 years old, Carl Mays continued to play an active role in baseball. For 15 years he directed a baseball camp for promising young players and served as a scout for several professional baseball teams, including the Cleveland Indians. He was the consummate coach with a keen eye for potential talent. Beyond his management skills, Carl finally found a showcase for his natural, friendly personality. He developed a wide circle of friends, young and old, and became a prominent baseball elder statesman in the process. He willingly discussed the traumatic events surrounding the tragic death of Ray Chapman - sad memories of his past.

The details of the death of Ray Chapman slowly faded from public memory. Few beyond the circle of old baseball fans remembered the sad announcement, and the name of Carl Mays blended into that forgotten legion of fabulous baseball pitchers who dominated the game in the early decades of the 20th century. Along with his memory, the details of his career and true personality faded away as well.

Carl was visiting in El Cajon, California, when he died suddenly on April 4, 1971. He was in his 79th year. His remains were returned to Portland, Oregon, to be interred beside his first wife, Marjorie Madden Mays. The obituary which ran in the San Diego Union carried the two-line heading which read, "Carl Mays, Yankee Whose Pitch Killed Batter in 1920, Is Dead." It was a typical media commentary about a man they knew nothing about and for whom they cared less. Today, the mortal remains of Carl William Mays repose eternally in Riverside Cemetery in Portland, Multnomah County, Oregon, the final resting place of a fine baseball player.

In closing, it is timely to mention a few facts about baseball traditions and perception. Carl Mays was given the media-coined title of "head hunter," a negative connotation which conjures up images of a person bent on injuring another. Mays was far from being the exclusive target of that unflattering term. The names of Burleigh Grimes, Bob "Lefty" Grove, Cy Young, Mordecai "Three Finger Brown," Early Wynn, Don Drysdale, and even Roger Clemens, of contemporary fame, are saddled with that title.

In reality the phrase "head hunter" identifies an aggressive pitcher who is determined to deter a batter from encroaching too far into his small target - the strike zone. That zone extends from the chest to the knees vertically and the width of home plate, a small rectangular area when viewed from sixty feet away. A batter leaning into the zone is traditionally warned to back away when a strike catches the inside edge of the zone nearest the hitter. Those who elect to stand too close to the zone are aware that they must be ready to give way. A valuable tool of the aggressive "head hunter" are a scowl and ominous demeanor on the mound. That, along with a two-day growth of beard, provide very effective visual staging for an inside pitch. It is a traditional and time-honored tool of many good pitchers.

As mentioned in the beginning, this tale deals with three Masons who were deeply involved in the Chapman tragedy; Carl Mays, Ray Chapman, and Joe Sewell. Those names serve to remind us that Freemasonry permeated professional baseball in great numbers during the Golden Age of the Fraternity in the early 20th century. On the same Yankee team with Carl Mays were many Masons, four of them nationally prominent; Waite Hoyt, Roger Peckinpaugh, Herb Pennock, and "Home Run" Baker. Those names comprise only a small percentage of some 750 Masonic baseball players enumerated by Jerry R. Erikson in his renowned Brothers of the Bat. To our great sorrow, the fraternal hand was never extended to Carl Mays during his professional career. It might have been a source of support and comfort to a misjudged Brother.

Our esoteric instructions admonish us to strive to "Live respected and die regretted." Carl Mays provided the qualifiers to deserve that goal. Unfortunately, it was not accorded him to any degree during his public life. His public media image did not reflect the inner man - religious, respectable, and highly successful in keeping his passions within due bounds. It is certain that Raymond Chapman would be the first to agree, if it were possible.

When I reflect on the erosion suffered by our Fraternity, I am reminded of some lyrics of a popular folk song from the 1950s, "Where have all the young men gone? Gone to graveyards, every one..." It would have been a fitting epitaph for Carl William Mays; a good man and true, denied his place in the sun.

Sale of Blue Lodge Afghan-Throw to Benefit the KTEF

This Blue Lodge throw is made of 100% cotton and has many advantages over the old triple-weave design because it has 360 picks per square inch, which enhances the color immensely. There are new items in this design, including the 3 steps to Freemasonry. It has a black and white checkered floor leading up to the center column, and the compass and square are larger and enhanced with a cluster of leaves symbolizing Acacia of Freemasonry. The afghan measures 48-in. by 60-in, and is lightweight but weaved very tight for definition.

There are only 1,000 of these made, and each one comes with a beautiful certificate so that you may write your important dates of Freemasonry on it. The price is $48.00 each, including shipping in the US. A donation of $5.00 for each one sold will go to the KTEF. Send check or money order to: Sandra Knotts, PO Box 158, Trexlertown, PA 18087

Masonic Poster Now Available

The next phase of the DeMolay Public Relations Awareness campaign has become a reality. The Masonic Poster will soon be available. Already the Shrine of North America has committed to have at least one poster in each of their Shrines. The Scottish Rites have expressed similar interests.

The Poster Campaign is reaching the public on two levels - there is a poster directed to bringing new members into DeMolay, and this poster, which is directed at getting adults involved in DeMolay.

The poster highlights the four Masonic organizations that support DeMolay - Masonic Lodges, the Northern and Southern Scottish Rite, the Imperial Shrine of North America, and the Grand York Rite Bodies.

This poster illustrates the huge role that Masonry plays in the success of DeMolay. Masons of every level are involved with DeMolay for many reasons.

The goal of the poster is that Masons will see the poster and remember that they have a son, grandson, or nephew that might be interested in DeMolay. It may also inspire Masons to get involved with a local chapter as an Advisor, or if there isn't a local DeMolay Chapter, maybe the Masons in that Lodge will want to start one.

The poster will be available for purchase through the DeMolay & More Store this August. In order to get the poster into the hands of as many Masons as possible, we have deeply discounted the price of the poster. For more information visit www.demolay.org or call 1-800-DEMOLAY.

Hall of Fame Now On Web

In an exciting development, we've added the entire DeMolay Alumni Hall of Fame to the DeMolay web site, www.demolay.org.

Originally started in 1937 by our founder, Frank S. Land, the Hall of Fame was created to recognize the athletic achievements of DeMolays. The original Hall of Fame had seven members: Larry French, pitcher for the Chicago Cubs; Dick Bartell, shortstop for the New York Giants; Don Budge, national tennis champion; Stan Hack, third baseman for the Chicago Cubs; Lowell Spurgeon, football captain of Illinois University; Vernon Struck, football captain of Harvard University; and Archie San Romani, Olympic track miler.

In 1986, the DeMolay Hall of Fame re-emerged with a new class of initiates, fourteen in all. The new Hall of Fame contained not just athletes, but also entertainers, politicians, and many other notables including Walter "Red" Barber, Harmon Killebrew, Fran Tarkenton, John Cameron Swayze, Gary Collins, Walt Disney, and John Wayne. Since then a stream of new inductees have followed at a rate of about one or two per year. We currently have 49 members.

Each distinguished Hall of Fame member has a line drawing portrait as well as an extensive biography, including home chapter information. Each biography tells the story of that one specific man, his life, and how he was affected by DeMolay. Most biographies also include a quote directly from that person about his experience with DeMolay.

You now have the entire library of DeMolay Hall of Fame members at your fingertips. Take time to stop by and learn about all our distinguished members - maybe one was a member of your home chapter!

Mother Chapter Honorary Membership Available

Membership in Mother Chapter, the first DeMolay chapter, is a high honor that few were able to reach. Now, for a limited time, it is attainable to DeMolays, Senior DeMolays, Master Masons, and other interested parties.

For years, many have expressed interest in Mother Chapter, but haven't had the opportunity to join the chapter. Missouri DeMolay has changed that with their new program "Mother Chapter Honorary Member for Life." There are levels to match every person's needs and budget.

With each membership, you receive a unique "Mother Chapter Honorary Member for Life" patent bearing your name or the name you designate in hand calligraphy with the symbolic signature of DeMolay's Founder, Frank S. Land and the seal of Mother Chapter. You will also receive an exclusive metal "Gold" Membership Card. Although all donors will receive these commemorative treasures, a limited series of 250 patents will be available as well.

All patents will be presented with a Certificate of Authenticity, will designate the level of giving, and will bear the sacred landmarks of DeMolay.

"Dad" Frank S. Land and the Original Nine DeMolays led the way and worked hard to build the greatest youth movement in the world - DeMolay. Now you have the opportunity of a lifetime to share in and be part of the Legacy of DeMolay for life. In doing so, you are also supporting today's DeMolay, since this program helps support DeMolay's activities and scholarships.

Becoming a "Mother Chapter Honorary Member for Life" is easy. Just contact Missouri DeMolay at 1-877-318-1919 or e-mail mother@modemolay.org.

As Knights Templar and Scottish Rite Brothers, we are asking for help with a special project: We are going to schools with articles from WWII in display and giving personal accounts of experiences in combat. I was in the infantry in Europe, and my friend, Glen Sumner, was in the Pacific in the Navy during 1944-1945. We have been able to take many items to these sessions. We are on our own and have no backing, but we are willing to pay any reasonable price for items we can use. These children have little knowledge of what it was all about. If you can help, contact us at Charles Beal, 3514 Delrose Drive, Knoxville, TN 37914. On request we can send copies of photos taken during presentations.
